Stage 3: Adjudication

Once the application submission date closes, all submissions along with supporting evidence and other documents provided, will be supplied to the shortlisting panels for the judging process. Applications will be individually assessed to determine if there is missing information or need for further clarification. The judges will individually assess applications before meeting as a group to discuss each application and determine the shortlisted finalists. Each submission will be rated against the award criteria.

Stage 4: Finalist announcements

All applicants will be contacted via email and notified of the outcome of their submission.

Stage 5: Referee checks

Referee checks can be conducted at any stage of the judging process. We will contact you if needed.

AWARDS CRITERIA:

Assessment of applications will be made by a third-party jury from Canada’s Positive Psychology community, experienced and respected leaders in workplace well-being, and leading educators. Assessment of judges will be based on the demonstration of a commitment to creating a workplace culture which values and promotes employee psychological well-being. The organization can demonstrate the program by providing examples of initiatives, practices and approaches that leverage the principles of positive psychology and yield significant impacts to your employee’s level of happiness and psychological well-being, and allow your organization to flourish. The programs can be employee and/or organizationally-led initiatives.

Tips and Hints

Suggested areas to potentially cover in your application based on positive psychology:

Positive emotional climate; growth mindset; compassion; job crafting; strength-based approaches; bringing out the best in people; an appreciative approach; helping people reach their potential professionally and personally; meaning in work; accomplishment and purpose; sense of belonging; engagement etc.

Criterion	Suggested evidence (the more evidence that you are able to provide, the more robust your application. Provide whatever information you have)
Engagement and Productivity	Evidence that the initiative led to increased engagement and productivity at work such as survey results prior to and post implementation of the initiative or demonstrated increase in productivity that can be linked to the initiative
Well-being	Evidence that the program is based on improving psychological well-being beyond traditional health, fitness and nutrition programs. Evidence of the initiative embedded in current people management strategy. Concrete examples of the initiative being implemented within the organization i.e. scheduling of activities, feedback from employees, newsletters/communications announcing initiative components.
Positive Psychology	Demonstrate that the initiative is designed using positive psychology tools, practices, positive psychology-based assessments (such as VIA Character Strengths, flow building etc. Documentation showing the implementation of processes and tools contributing to employee engagement, happiness, satisfaction and/or well-being within the organization.

Innovation	How does the program demonstrate the organization has thoroughly understood the areas of well-being and the needs of its employees? Evidence of creativity and innovation in providing well-being initiatives that stand out from known best practices or new approaches that contribute to positive climate (examples: job design, strength-based approaches, relationship building training and initiatives that foster strong connections in a virtual world, helping employees thrive and reach their potential (i.e. how does the program demonstrate creative thinking and differentiation)?
Impact and measurement	Evidence that the program has achieved its objectives and goals including measurements of success or KPI before interventions versus after the well-being program implemented (i.e. how do you know about the positive impact on employees and the community? Are there measures of increased engagement, metrics on usage of the well-being program as a percentage of employees? Evidence of improvements and outcomes identified as resulting from the initiative. Stakeholder surveys conducted pre/post initiative i.e climate survey results, engagement survey results, survey results specifically relating to the initiative. Budget implications of the initiative ie cost savings/increases in revenue as a result of the initiative. Evidence that the community has benefited from the well-being initiative of the organization (e.g. the organization promotes altruism, donations, offering of skills to the community in need, supporting voluntary activities, fostering interdependence between the organization and the community.
Sense of commitment/priority of well-being program to/within the organization	Evidence of sustainability of well-being program put in place (continuous communication, the commitment is likely to last beyond the immediate? Have there been policies and procedures adapted to enhance and maintain a positive culture? How integrated is the well-being program? Evidence that top leadership prioritizes well-being of employees as a means to success (i.e. advertising, promotion, branding, internal communication, performance plans, recognition of employees and new policies may all be indicators. Who is involved in supporting the well-being program? Evidence that management training programs have been put in place for existing and new managers to impact on the quality of leadership and maintain commitment and priority for well-being.
